ANDREWS MEASURE DIES IN THE HOUSE

Administration Liquor License Proposal Is Defeated in Lower Assembly.

WILLIS MAKES EMPHATIC DECLARATION

Says That Before Legislature Adjourns Statute Will Be Enacted Decentralizing Licensing Authority and Preserving Law Enforcement.

Special Columbus Correspondent.

Columbus, April 29.—A sort of crisis in the general assembly has resulted from the action of the house Wednesday afternoon in defeating the administration liquor license "decentralizer" as constituted in the Andrews bill. Responsibility for the defeat of the measure is being laid at the door of the alleged weakness of the bill itself, and plans are being made to prepare a substitute or compromise measure. Following the defeat of the bill Gov. Willis made the emphatic declaration that before the legislature adjourns sine die a statute will be enacted decentralizing the licensing authority and preserving the law enforcement in the state. It was an amalgamation between the Cincinnati Republicans and the Democratic side that caused the state administration to suffer the most serious setback of the present session. Many observers aver that the defeat was due in part, at least, to the failure of the administration leaders to prepare for their battle, and whether this is true or not, the fight on the floor indicated, at least superficially, that the opponents of the bill had laid their plans more carefully than the friends. The Democrats stood practically as a unit against the bill. The Democratic floor leader, John Kramer of Richland county, made a speech against it, charging that by providing for the selection of saloon licensees at primary elections the bill failed to fix any central responsibility in the event of looseness in the observance of the law. Andrews, the author of the bill, declared that its prime purpose was to prevent the building up of a state machine through the agency of the saloons and the license employees, and on this ground he made his main fight.

Passenger Rate War Reaches Climax.

The railroad passenger rate war has reached its climax in the assembly. The newest phase of the fight is the proposal of Representative Young of Cleveland, a Democrat, that the present 2-cent passenger fare law be decreased to 1 1/2 cents a mile, and Young now is holding this proposal as a club against the contenders for a higher fare. The bill of the Cleveland Democrat appeared in the assembly soon after its author had failed in his efforts to postpone indefinitely the substitute Thatcher bill, which seeks to permit the railroads to charge 2 1/2 cents a mile, subject to the right of the state utilities commission to suspend the increase pending an investigation. The interest in the rate war is growing more intense hourly, and before the end of the week it promises to occupy the center of the legislative spotlight.

Get Extension of Tenure.

Chief clerks and clerks of election boards in all counties got an extension of tenure from next August until the following May as a result of a ruling by Attorney General Turner. The last legislature enacted a law changing the terms of election board members so that they would begin on the first day of August instead of the first day of May, and the effect of this was to extend the term of members whose terms otherwise would have expired this coming August 1 to May of next year. In a ruling to Secretary of State Charles Q. Hildebrand, who is chief election supervisor, the attorney general holds that this extension also applies to the chief clerks and the other clerks of the boards.

Position May Be Restored.

Educators are trying to persuade the legislature to rescind its purpose to abolish the position of state supervisor of rural schools, which is held by W. A. McCurdy of Coshocton, and there is some prospect that the position may be restored. McCurdy has the reputation of being one of the best school men in the country on rural school problems, and it is generally admitted that he has done much to improve rural school conditions. The legislature decided to do away with the position of state supervisor of normal schools, held by Henry G. Williams, former dean of Ohio university, Athens, at the same time, and it is not likely that it will put this place back.

Not Giving Full Weight.

Many Ohio millers are giving full weight, so an investigation just made by Fred C. Albrecht, chief inspector of weights and measures of the state agricultural commission, shows. Many sacks of flour which were taken and weighed were found to be short as much as a pound in weight. The attention of the members of the Ohio Millers' association, now holding their annual meeting in Columbus, was called to this violation of the law on the part of unscrupulous dealers, and they promised to aid the department in putting a stop to the short-weighting practice.

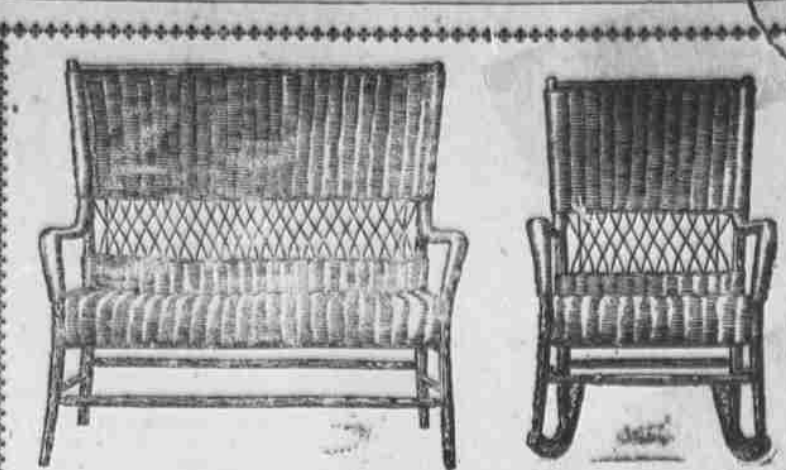

Free Woman in Vote Case.

Paris, Ill., April 29.—Mrs. Hattie O'Neill, who was arrested on a charge of buying votes in the recent city election, was discharged at her hearing. H. Clay Moss, arrested on a charge of buying votes, was held to the grand jury.

What is a Gentleman?

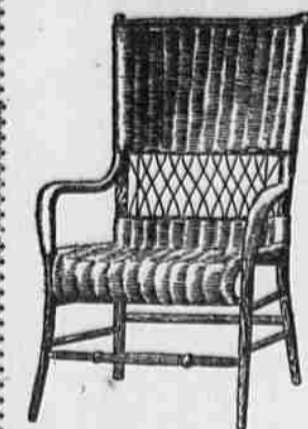

An exact definition of a gentleman has been tried many times, never perhaps with entirely satisfactory results. Little Sadie had never heard any of the definitions, but she managed to throw a gleam of light on the subject, albeit one touched with unconscious cynicism. The word was in the spelling lesson, and I said: "Sadie, what is a gentleman?" "Please ma'am," she answered, "a gentleman's a man you don't know very well."

IDEAL IN SUMMER

Kalltex FURNITURE

Summer days are really "veranda days," for it is there that most of the waking hours of yourself and family are spent.

On the veranda you receive your friends and do your entertaining, and it is there the visitor gets his first impression of your home; therefore, great care should be exercised in the selection of the veranda furniture.

Kalltex Furniture is not only intended for summer use, but it is very stylish, cozy and comfortable, indoors, all the year round. No up-to-date home is without at least one room furnished in graceful, harmonious, elegant Kalltex.

Hunting Grounds for Naturalists. Those who are curious about birds may spend time to great profit in looking at the poulterers' shops when game is in season. There they will find many rare and even valuable specimens that apparently have been thrown into the hamper by the man who shot them on the chance of his receiving something from the London dealer. A very good museum of stuffed birds might be got by simply purchasing those that through lack have found their way into Lead-ball market.

Uncle Sam's $7,200,000 Investment. It was forty-two years ago that Alaska was purchased for $7,200,000. The price seemed large at that time, because very few persons in the United States supposed that that province would ever pay for itself.

The amount of gold which Alaska now furnishes every year would pay that sum three times over. And its fish, furs, lumber and other products add largely to its revenue, which the country is getting from its big northern colony. Moreover, a beginning has not yet been made in developing its capabilities.
